

StoryBoard

Every piece. One picture.

Each scrum team is a piece. The white piece is the one leadership never used to see, now clicking into place. It animates well: four pieces fly in, and the story is complete.

StoryBoard

The story of your sprint.

The left page holds the narrative (decisions, risks, conversations) and the right page holds the numbers. It says "story + data" in one glance and reads warm and editorial rather than dashboard-y.

Storyboard

Your sprint, in its own words.

A speech bubble whose content is a burndown line: the data is doing the talking. It pairs naturally with the first-person narrator ("I'm StoryBoard...") and stays crisp at 16px favicon size.

Storyboard

0 → 1, and everything in between.

An "S" drawn as a sprint timeline. The hollow dot is 0, the solid dot is 1, and the milestones in between are what leadership never saw before. In the video it draws itself as a line.

HERO LINE · END CARD & NARRATOR SIGN-OFF

I'm StoryBoard.

I'm here to tell
the story of your sprint.

Your line, kept as the spoken sign-off. I split it into two beats so the voiceover can pause on "I'm StoryBoard" before the promise lands.

SHORT LOCKUP LINES · PICK ONE TO SIT UNDER THE LOGO

The story of your sprint.

1 · Shortest echo of the hero line

Every piece. One picture.

2 · The jigsaw idea, for the roll-up

0 → 1, and everything in between.

3 · Speaks directly to leadership's pain

We need the story. Not the hours.

4 · The "need it, shouldn't spend time on it" point
